DETAILED ACTION

Priority

Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1, 2, 6, 7, 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Korean Patent Abstract 8868' in view of Newman, Jr. et al. Korean Abstract teaches that it is conventional to detect voltage magnitude and vary the duty cycle to the heater in response to this detection, to effect uniform power control. Korean 8868' just mentions duty cycle control to effect the compensation, not specifically mentioning phase delay of the control signal. The patent to Newman, Jr. et al is applied for teaching that it is conventional to use phase control to compensate for input voltage conditions such as voltage and frequency variation. This leads to uniform power being attained. See column 8 lines 56 to column 9 line 27. See column 3 for recognition of input voltage level variation. In view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify Korean 8868' to vary the duty ratio using phase control in lieu of unspecified control, since use of the same is conventional as set forth in Newman, Jr. and would lead to more uniform power output from the heating element.

Since As per claim 2 note that it is considered an obvious choice in design for the artisan to vary the reference signal in response to the detection scheme, the same being common in control systems. As per claim 6, note use of the controller in fixing units in Korean 8868'.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 3-5,9-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: With respect to claims 3 the prior art of record does not teach use of the claimed specific pulse generator. AS per claim 4 the prior art of record does not set forth use of Led's to effect the voltage sensing for the input line voltage.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Lin et al, Barrett and Porter et al are cited for disclosing heating controls systems of interest.
